“I wonder what it is like for a loving Heavenly Father to send His most precious belongings, His children, away from their heavenly home, knowing they must pass through the challenges of mortality. How beloved and precious His children are to Him.”

“And how beloved and blessed are those who care for and nurture others.”

“... our Heavenly Father also places a claim upon us. . . “You are mine. I know you. You are not alone. I have not forgotten you. I intend to bring you home.”

This is more than logistics.

This is redemption.”

“This evokes memories of familiar scenes: a mother—father—at a curb or platform, bidding farewell to their student, soldier, or missionary. Years of teaching, preparation, and prayer culminate in a moment of placing their cherished possession into the care of others—trusting conscientious stewards to care for their son or daughter through the duration of their journey until they are reunited.”

Gary E. Stevenson, “Lost Luggage. Redeemed Souls” April 2026
